ABOUT NOEL

Noel Rosencranz is a keynote speaker, executive coach and trainer who has spent fifteen years helping founders, executives, and teams perform without burning out. He has coached leaders at Google, Microsoft, and Intel, worked with hundreds of leaders through Stanford Graduate School of Business's LEAD program, and run group trainings at Cedars-Sinai, UCLA Anderson, Providence, Newfront Insurance, and Coppola Wines. He holds two Stanford degrees, built and sold an education company over eight years, and created an improv-based training method that has held a 100% satisfaction rate across every session he has run.

SIGNATURE TALKS

Comfortable Being Uncomfortable

Why the discomfort you're avoiding is usually the doorway.

They leave with: How to spot the discomfort they've been avoiding, and one move toward it this week.

Good for: All-hands, sales kickoffs, anyone facing change

What High-Performing Teams Do Differently

The habits behind teams that click.

They leave with: The "Yes, And" habits (listen, build on each other, make each other look good) and a way to use them at the next meeting.

Good for: Leadership offsites and team retreats

Reinvent Yourself

How to put down an old identity and pick up the one you want.

They leave with: A clear picture of the identity they're ready to put down, and the first step toward the one they want.

Good for: Alumni associations, career events, conferences

WHAT ORGANIZERS SAY

"Noel taught 350 of our business school students how to be more persuasive and impactful... We were so thrilled with the results that we brought him back again and again."

Emily Taylor, Director, MBA Career Education & Communications, UCLA Anderson

"Within minutes you could feel the room lean in and the energy change. Educational, entertaining, and he commanded the room, a rare combo."

Forrest Wittenmeir, Founding Partner, Newfront Insurance
